Sixth, Job suffered though hearing his wife's words. Instead of comforting him and helping him through his trials, Job's wife jumped on the bandwagon and told Job just to "curse God and die"(2:9).

Seventh, Job was accused of sin by his three friends. How painful it must have been for Job to have a brief respite from his pain when he saw his friends coming to mourn with him and comfort him (2:11), yet the only help they offered were words to accuse Job of sin.

What can help us in our suffering? First, let us realize that just as God was with Job, He will be with us. Just as God was full of compassion and mercy (James 5:11) while Job was mired in grief, God will be with us! Second, let us realize that just as Job made it through his challenges, so we can make it through ours! Just like Job, we may even come out on the other end of those challenges with better character than before. Third, we can worship. In light of what Job was facing, he knew the true source of strength was God. He fell on his face and worshipped (1:20). May we turn to God to help us deal with our grief!
