10 Priorities in our Home - Part 2

(by Steven D. Minor)

To Review from Part 1 - In our home we fervently desire our children...

1. To know, love and respect the Word of God.....2. To be genuinely dedicated Christians.....3. To have an answer for the hope within them.....4. To be willing to stand alone.....5. To wisely know that there are times when it's okay to quit (extra-curriculars).

--- Part 2 ---

6. To understand it's all going to burn. In our families, where do our houses, cars, clothes, and tech devices rank when it comes to our eternal reward? (1 Peter 3:10-12, Matthew 6:19-20)

7. To wait for the season of marriage to find a committed Christian mate. Building... "an intimacy at an early age with as many guys or girls as you can to see which one fits you best", you usually have a receipt for spiritual disaster. How different from the world would it be for us as parents to be actively involved in helping our son or daughter pick out a spouse that would meet the expectations of Ephesians 5 and 1 Peter 3?

8. To maintain a strong prayer life. I'm not referring to just "saying prayers". When our children see and hear us plead with God and praise Him on a daily basis - we are voicing our faith! (1 Thessalonians 5:17)

9. To never be satisfied with their holiness. While we need to be content with what we physically have, we should never be content with our walk with God. Parents, we should take constant inventory of our relationship with God, asking ourselves, "What can I give up for God today?" and "How can I imitate my Father better?" (1 Peter 1:15-16, Ephesians 4:1)

10. To stay focused on Heaven during the happy times as well as the sad times. Heaven should be part of our homes, our conversations, and our goals in life. What messages are we sending our children? Do we spend more time and energy fixing up our earthly home than preparing for our eternal home? (2 Timothy 4:7-8)
